

Attraction, Repulsion, and Sorting

Angela Stevens

University of Muenster

Species with different attraction towards each other are studied. Interestingly they may spatially separate into neighboring regions, each of them only containing one of the types. This phenomenon may play a crucial role in developmental processes.

(joint work with M. Burger, M. Di Francesco, S. Fagioli)